Greetings from ISCCP and a Healthy life to all,

The rapidly expanding COVID-19 pandemic has impacted all areas of daily life, including medical care. The primary intervention to slow the disease are physical distancing, hand hygiene, use of mask for respiratory hygiene, and staying home as much as possible. These interventions are affecting the psychosocial health in general population and affecting the recovery of already ill patients as well. Appropriate care to cancer patients during this pandemic is challenging and the of death from cancer versus death or serious complications from SARS-CoV-2, and the likely higher lethality of COVID-19 in immunocompromised hosts is to be carefully balanced. Other challenges which we all are facing comprise of cancellations of in-hospital visits; delays in routine cancer screening leading to significant declines in the number of patients with newly identified cancers during the pandemic and surgery postponements or cancellations. There is no "one size fits all" approach to delivering cancer care during the COVID-19 pandemic, and no international guidelines.

Treatment decisions must be made on a case-by-case basis. Although in the current scenario, all the cancer patients in need of surgery must be undertaken
